man and General Grief at His Demise-The Cause of His Death -- Executive Action.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., November 26 .-Vice-President Hendricks died very suddenly and unexpectedly at his residence on North Tennessee street in this city at five o'clock last evening. The demise of our illustrious citizen was so unlookedfor that the city was shocked at its occurrence, and the most of our people were loth to believe it until it was bulletined from the newspaper offices and confirmed by personal visits to the house. The stricken wife was visited by her immediate friends, but such was the shock to her nerves that it was with the greatest difficulty that she could talk upon the subject at all. The city is in mourning, and the great heart of Indiana is bleeding over the remains of her distinguished son.

Mr. Hendricks returned from Chicago on Monday suffering from a very severe cold, and complained of pains in his head and breast, but his condition was not such as to awaken fears for his safety. Dr. Thompson, the family physician, was called, and the patient insisted upon calomel being administered to him. This the physician refused to do, owing to the prostrating effects which the drug always produced upon Mr. Hendricks, but he gave him an emetic, and later in the day an injection. Tuesday night the Vice-Preisdent had so much improved that and Mrs. Hendricks attended a reception at the residence of State Treasurer Cooper. Mr. Hendricks usually wears heavy clothing, but Tuesday night he took this off and donned a dress suit of lighter material. They returned home a little before twelve o'clock. During the entertainment Mr. Hendricks was in personal appearance as well as usual, and none, save a few, to whom he spoke about the matter, sup-cosed that he was suffering pain. He complained to one or two, however, that he was feeling unwell, but did not ex-press any apprehension of fatal conse-

He slept well during the night and arose yesterday morning apparently re-freshed and feeling better. An hour or two later he was taken with a rigor, and, despite the efforts of the attending physi-cian, the force of the chill remained unbroken for quite an hour, and was accompanied with pains in the stomach. Dr. Thompson gave him an emetic and an injection, which brought relief. He arose from his bed, in which he had lain only a few minutes and read Os the 1st a pitched battle occurred be-tween the police and several hundred women at the Polish Catholic Church at Defroit, Mich., in which the police were he engaged in conversation with the patient on several subjects, among which ure for Washington and the resumption of his duties as President of the Senate. Mr. Hendricks, however, appeared to be oppressed by his sickness, and was very solicitous that Mrs. Hendricks should be ilways near him. If she left the room for a moment he inquired concerning her and appeared ill at ease until she re-entered the room. When this disposition was developed Mrs. Hendricks continued by his side, and was present during the visit of the physicians. the physicians were again summoned and dministered the usual remedies, beside bleeding the patient, and Mr. Hendricks again expressed himself as being greatly relieved. He remained in his room all the afternoon, occasionally rising from his bed, to which he was compelled to return by the recurrence of the abdominal pains. To all callers who came, and they were numerous, he sent word that he was in-disposed, but would be glad to see them

About 4:30 o'clock Mrs. Hendricks who had been at his bedside all day, went down into the parlor to see a caller who had come to consult with her regarding the affairs of a reformatory institute, of which she was one of the managers, and she remained with him about twenty minutes. Tom, a colored servant, and Harry Morgan, Mr. Hendricks' nephew and a page in Washington, remained with him. The servant went out and Mr. Morgan remained. Mr. Hendricks tossed uneasily in his bed and complained of great pain, but suddenly it seemed to cease, and he said to his nephew: "I am free at last; send for Eliza," meaning his wife, and these were his last words, for the young man left the room and not realizing the urgency of the message did not deliver it at once.

Just before five o'clock Mrs. Hendricks came into the room and found that her husband was dead. He died alone. The end of a long and eventful life had come peacefully and quietly. He lay in the bed, outside of the covering, only par-tially disrobed, with his eyes half closed as if he were in a cheerful sleep. On his face there were no traces of pain or suffering, but a pallor had come over it that indicated only too plainly that he had passed away. It needed no close exami-nation to tell that he was dead, and Mrs. Hendricks screamed and ran down stairs. A servant was dispatched to the residence of Dr. Thompson adjoining, and he came immediately, but by the time he had reached the bedside the limbs of the distinguished dead man were becoming cold and rigid, and to Mrs. Hendricks' pathetic appeal, "Oh, Doctor, can't you do something?" he was obliged to answer, "It is too late." Mrs. Hendricks became almost distracted with grief, and it was an hour or more before she became sufficiently composed to give any information about her neral will occur at noon on Tuesday, and the full Episcopal rites, without the fu-neral discourse, will be observed. For several years he had not been a robust man was subject to frequent "bad spells," as he called them, during which he would be prostrated sometimes for days at a time. About two years ago he was confined to his room for seven weeks by a gangrenous affection of the foot, which at the time it was feared would result in blood poisoning, and it was then thought that the end of his life was near at hand, but he apparently recovered en-tirely from this and was in his usual health. While in Washington during the last session of Congress he was over-worked and almost worn out by the press of political matters, and upon his return me he signified his intention of laying aside all public business this summer devoting the time to recreation. He spen three weeks at Atlantic City, fishing, bathing and yatching. and came West and went to the Northern lake resorts, and afterward to the Miami reservoir in Ohio, on a fishing expedition. He returned from there two weeks ago, and at that time said that he never felt better in his life. Last week, by special invitation, he attended the fat stock show at Chicago, and was the re-cipient of considerable attention there, in the way of banquets and receptions, returning home on Saturday, somewhat indisposed.
